BY GEORGE!

Bond Street, view from George Street

Issues

While Bond Street is not referred to as a laneway it forms part of an intricate network of lanes between Pitt and George Street between Hunter Street and Bridge Street.

Mid way along there is a through site link to Abercrombie Lane connecting to Tank Stream Way and bridge Lane.

Opportunities

The opportunities to close Bond Street are being considered by Council and should be considered by the project teams in By George! to demonstrate the potential for new outdoor spaces in the City.

Historical Information

In the early nineteenth century Bond Street was a lane that led from George Street down to the 'Tanks'. These tanks were the source of Sydney's water supply until 1827 when Mr Busby carved his bore from Centennial Park to the City.

More recently Bond Street has been the home of the Sydney Stock Exchange and is again in transition with the recent relocation of Macquarie Bank to King Street Wharf.
